LOCAL VESSEL AIDS LAME DUCK

With a broken pump in her engine, and unable to proceed under her own power, the auxiliary fishing schooner Stranger of Boston was picked up by the Flora L. Oliver of this port, half a mile off Boston Light, early last night. The Stranger was heading out to sea with Capt. Andrew Meade who is also the owner, in command. When the accident to the pump occurred, the vessel was sighted by the Gloucester schooner almost immediately. The latter came alongside, and Capt. William Meuse offered to tow the crippled vessel to port.

FISHERMEN BEACH SINKING CRAFT

The fishing schooner Parker W. was beached by the Railroad Wharf at Wood's Hole, late yesterday, just before she would have sunk from water pouring in through a gaping hole in her bottom. She struck some under-water floating obstruction in Vineyard Haven Sound on her way to New Bedford from the fishing grounds.

Capt. Hale and his crew of three brought her in under her own power after the accident. They manned the pumps while pushing her at top speed to beat the flow of water. A load of swordfish weighed down the gunwales of the craft, making their situation more precarious. The Parker W. is owned by P. T. O'Connell of Newport, R. I.

PLENTY OF FISH FOR SPLITTERS

ONLY TWO SEINERS BROUGHT ANY MACKEREL HERE SINCE

PIER RECEIPTS 15 MILLION POUNDS AHEAD OF 1928

Gronudfish receipts continue large at the Boston fish pier and are over 15,000,000 pounds ahead of last year, although the 4,359,150 pounds landed during the week ending July 25 was slightly less than the landings for the corresponding week of 1928. There were 91 arrivals last week.

In the same week last year, 103 vessels brought in 4,736,500 pounds of fresh fish.

From January 1 to date there have been 3247 arrivals and receipts of 147,294,812 pounds of fresh fish while in the same time in 1928 there were 3184 arrivals and receipts of 132,120,660 pounds.
